

The Major in Anthropology

The Major in Anthropology consists of ten courses, to be selected as follows:

1. Two introductory courses: Choose from ANTH 01, 03, 05, 06, 08, or 09.
2. Seven other ANTH courses. Courses must include at least one each from ARCH, CULT and BIOL. (NOTE: Introductory courses may count toward these subject area courses.)
3. A Culminating Experience Seminar, which is designated by course numbers in the 70s, (e.g. ANTH 72 – ANTH 76). Seminars are usually offered in Fall and Spring terms.

NOTE: You may choose to concentrate in one of the subfields of anthropology by taking at least four courses in: archaeology, biological anthropology, or cultural anthropology.

Additionally, if you are interested in pursuing the Honors Program and the faculty approves your thesis proposal, you must enroll in ANTH 88. This course would be counted as the eleventh course beyond the ten required to complete the major.

A special note about statistics

All anthropology majors are encouraged to take a course in statistics. Students who plan to undertake independent research, especially in archaeology and biological anthropology, and any student considering attending graduate school in anthropology should take at least one statistics course: e.g., Government 10, Math & Social Science 15, Psychology 10, Sociology 10, or Social Science 10.

Major Worksheet

Two introductory Course
(choose from ANTH 01, 03, 05, 06, 08, or 09):

ANTH _____ Term _____

ANTH _____ Term _____

Seven other Anthropology Courses including one from each sub-field: ARCH, CULT, and BIOL.

ANTH _____ Term _____ Sub-Field _____

ANTH _____ Term _____ Sub-Field _____

ANTH _____ Term _____ Sub-Field _____

ANTH _____ Term _____

ANTH _____ Term _____

ANTH _____ Term _____

ANTH _____ Term _____

Culminating Experience Seminar

ANTH _____ Term _____