

Darwin and Human Evolution Symposium: Feb. 17-18, 2023

Reflecting on Charles Darwin's impact on the study of human evolution and biological diversity a century and a half after he published Descent of Man, this event will feature the authors who contributed to A Most Interesting Problem: What Darwin's Descent Got Right and Wrong about Human Evolution (Princeton University Press, 2021).

Friday February 17th

Life Sciences Room 100 - 15 Dewey Field Road, Hanover, NH

3:00 - Welcome by Jeremy DeSilva, Dartmouth College

3:10 - 3:40: Remarkable but not extraordinary. The evolution of the human brain - Suzana Herculano-Houzel, Vanderbilt University

3:45 - 4:15: Darwin and the human fossil record - Jeremy DeSilva, Dartmouth College

4:15 - 4:25: Break

4:30 - 5:00: The Darwinian road to morality - Brian Hare, Duke University

5:05 - 5:35: Ranking humanity among the primates - John Hawks, University of Wisconsin

5:40 - 6:00: Roundtable discussion, Q&A

Saturday February 18th

Filene Auditorium, Moore Building - 3 Maynard St, Hanover, NH

10:30 - Conference resumes at Filene Auditorium, Moore building

10:35 - 11:05: Race, racism, science, and hope - Agustín Fuentes, Princeton University

11:10 - 11:40: Resolving the problem of sexual beauty - Michael Ryan, University of Texas Austin

11:45 - 12:15: This view of wife - Holly Dunsworth, University of Rhode Island

12:15 - 12:30: Break & snacks

12:35 - 1:05: Dinner with Darwin: Sharing the evidence bearing on the origin of humans - Ann Gibbons, Science magazine

1:10 - 1:30: Roundtable discussion. Q&A

Funding for this conference provided by Fannie & Alan Leslie